Chapter 1 by Tailors <3

I can become invisible. I don't know how I do it. I don't know why. I just can. I find it quite interesting. It's fun. Actually, I should say, It was fun.

Chapter 2 by Amelia Rose

It was fun when I stole from the corner shops by my house and watched the owners scrambling around trying to find me while I licked a quickly melting ice cream. It was fun when someone was being rude to me and I could just disappear. It was fun to just turn invisible in front of strangers and watch their shocked faces.

It was fun.

But now I am trapped in a confined government facility, and each day I am taken out of my tiny white cell and tested on so they can try and figure me out.

This is not fun.

No, I needed to find a way out. But the facility was too big. I would lose myself instantly. Even with my invisibility. I

"Okay dear, stand up! Time for more testing..." I groaned inwardly. I hated being punctured with needles and strapped to a bed.

My doctor entered the room. "How is my little patient today?" He said, slapping my shoulder. I just looked out the small barred window, pretending not to hear.

"Well, let's get this done. I have to head into town and pick up a load of supplies afterwards." The doctor was speaking to the nurse, but they never spoke about "The Outside." I wondered if maybe they had been reading my thoughts. Was this a trick, to see if I would try to runaway?

I kept acting like I was interested at the blue sky. Scared that they would see the sweat accumulating on my forehead. The sweat wetting my palms.

"Okay lay back and close your eyes!"

Chapter 4 by The Book of Stories

Reluctantly, I did as told. The attempt to escape would have to wait, after the painful hours of agony from testing.

I was back into my room, torn apart by the previous testing today. They had put down...two food trays? Are they about to double feed me..? I don't think so.

I quickly back into the corner when I hear footsteps down the hall. I guess some test subject got out. "Gotcha!" A doctor yelled, achieving whatever it was after. My cell door burst opened and my doctor threw in a girl. He slammed the door behind him and left.

The girl meekly got up and dusted off her clothes and sat down curled up in a ball.

"H-hello.." I said quietly. "Whats your power..?"

"I don't know." The girl said.

"Oh.. I didn't expect that."

Chapter 5 by Wolf Rex

We stare at each other awkwardly. I want to speak first. As we stared, my stomach grumbled, reminding me to eat, and that's what I decided that it was time to break the awkward silence.

"Umm, hey," I said. "You hungry?"
